Eric Garner, whose crime was selling loose cigarettes, was killed by police. His last words were "I can't breath". Activists have used this phrase as a reminder of the murder.

Police Officer Jason Barthel of South Bend Uniform Company thought it would be funny to mock this mans dying words by selling T-shirts to fellow cops which say "Breath Easy, Don't Break the Law".

Apparently the implication is that no matter how ridiculous the law you can expect to be killed if you don't follow it. And that is your fault.

Cops are buying the shirts by the dozen.
